Overview

As part of the ongoing management programme for environmental issues at several of the Australian sites, many different types of monitoring data were in the process of being collated, verified and managed. Continuous concerns were raised about the short term and long term impact on the ecosystems within the operational mine sites. In order to retain complete control of the environmental data management whilst complying with the statutory regulations, led to the investigation of implementing an environmental data management system.

After success at other mines sites, MonitorPro Enterprise was implemented to manage monitoring data and environmental obligations.
